Tanzanians to enjoy Africa's first universal mobile money service

Stockholm, 25 February, 2015 – Millicom (Stockholmsbörsen: MIC) announced today that customers of its Tigo Pesa mobile money service in Tanzania will be the first in Africa to be able to transact with users of all their country's mobile money networks following an agreement with Vodacom's M-Pesa service.

The agreement means that four million Tigo Pesa users will for the first time be able to exchange money with six million M-Pesa customers in Tanzania later this year. They will be able to do this in the same way that they do already with Airtel and Zantel customers following the launch of similar services with Tigo in 2014. These were the first examples of such "interoperability" in Africa.

Commenting on the announcement today, Millicom's Executive Vice President for Africa, Arthur Bastings, said "With Tigo Pesa customers will now have Africa's first universal mobile money exchange system. They will be able to safely and securely transact with millions more people across the country. It's another first for Tigo Pesa and Tanzania. Following the success of the service with Airtel and Zantel, we hope many more Tanzanians will choose mobile money so that everyone benefits and we can extend financial inclusion even further. We also intend to pioneer similar agreements with networks elsewhere."

The initiative with M-Pesa follows a series of Tigo Pesa innovations within the last year which have included:

- cross-border mobile money exchange with currency conversion included
- the first inter-network mobile money exchange with Airtel in 2014 and
- quarterly returns on Tigo Pesa balances.

Tigo has been shortlisted for an award for its money service innovations at next week's GSMA annual global mobile industry event in Barcelona.
